

James S. Lewis, PharmD

Infectious Diseases Pharmacy Programs Manager
University Health System Department of Pharmacy
Clinical Assistant Professor
University of Texas Health Sciences Center
San Antonio, Texas

Dr. James Lewis is Clinical Assistant Professor in the Department of Medicine – Division of Infectious Diseases at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center. Additionally, he is the Infectious Diseases Programs Manager and the Infectious Diseases Clinical Pharmacy Specialist at the University Health System in San Antonio, Texas, where he is also Pharmacy Practice Residency Advisor.

Dr. Lewis earned his Bachelor of Pharmacy degree and Doctorate in Pharmacy from Washington State University. He then did a pharmacy practice residency at Southwest Washington Medical Center in Vancouver, Washington followed by a specialty residency in infectious diseases pharmacotherapy in a combined program at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center at San Antonio and South Texas Veterans Health Care System.

Dr. Lewis has been published in several journals, including but not limited to Clinical Infectious Diseases, Pharmacotherapy, and Journal of Clinical Microbiology. He serves as a reviewer for several publications, among which are the JAMA, Clinical Infectious Diseases, and Annals of Pharmacotherapy. His current research focus is on fungal and bacterial infections and therapy. Dr. Lewis also has extensive experience in formulary management and cost-containment measures in the hospital setting. He is a member of several professional associations including American College of Clinical Pharmacy, Infectious Diseases Society of America, and American Society of Microbiology. He currently serves as a member of the Texas Department of Health Committee for the Judicious Use of Antibiotics - Medical Education Subcommittee.